CHIANTI CLASSICO

THE TERRITORY AND THE UGA

→ ADDITIONAL GEOGRAPHICAL UNITS TO BE USED STARTING FROM THE THIRD YEAR AFTER THE APPROVAL OF THE PROJECT

CHIANTI CLASSICO

THE TERRITORY AND THE UGA

THE UGA

An important new project initiative was approved by the Members' Assembly in June 2021. The production zone for Chianti Classico will be apportioned into tighter subdivisions with more homogenous characteristics, known as Unità Geografiche Aggiuntive, or Additional Geographical Units. These will be printed on the labels in future.

The project objectives include strengthening communication around the correlation between wine and place of origin, improving quality levels based on identity and source, facilitating consumer understanding of grape provenance and last but not least, stimulating demand by diversifying the offering. To this end, 11 Additional Geographical Units have been identified and demarcated within the Chianti Classico production area, each one distinguished by a combination of unique natural attributes (soil composition, microclimate, position of the vines etc) and human factors (cultural background, local traditions, community ethos).

The Additional Geographical Units will come into play once the administrative approval process associated with regulation and production change is complete. During the initial phase, they will apply only to Gran Selezione wines.

THE ADDITIONAL GEOGRAPHICAL UNITS FOR CHIANTI CLASSICO

CHIANTI CLASSICO

THE TERRITORY AND THE UGA

THE CHARACTERISTICS

The Chianti Classico territory's capitals are Siena and Florence and it is shared between the provinces of the two municipalities, amounting to 70,000 hectares (172,900 acres).

The Chianti area is mainly covered with woodlands, principally oak, chestnut and pine as well as cypress, situated on a plateau at altitudes between 200 and 800 metres. The highest altitude for growing grapes for Chianti Classico wine is 700 metres a.s.l. The local climate is continental with significant day-night temperature variation, generally low winter temperatures - below 4-5°C - and hot, dry summers, often reaching temperatures of over 35°.

Geologically the land is a shield of clayey schists (marl), with layers of scaly clay, alberese and fine limestone sandstone. The dark brown soil tends not to be deep, with structures ranging from clayey-sand to stony with average clay content.

The type of land varies considerably from one area to another, making it impossible to make a clear subdivision of the various soil types typical of Chianti. But it can also be said that marl-based soil is widespread in the San Casciano in Val di Pesa, while Greve in Chianti and all the lower altitude areas have typically clayey limestone soil; large sandstone rocks characterize the Monte dei Chianti ridge; alberese is the principal element of the central-southern area, and tuffstone rock is found in most of the Castelnuovo Berardenga area. The area with a marked sandstone presence are severe and steep while the limestone hills are softer and rounder, and the clayey hills are even gentler. Almost all the Chianti Classico production area, though, has soil rich in stony material, especially marl.

CHIANTI CLASSICO

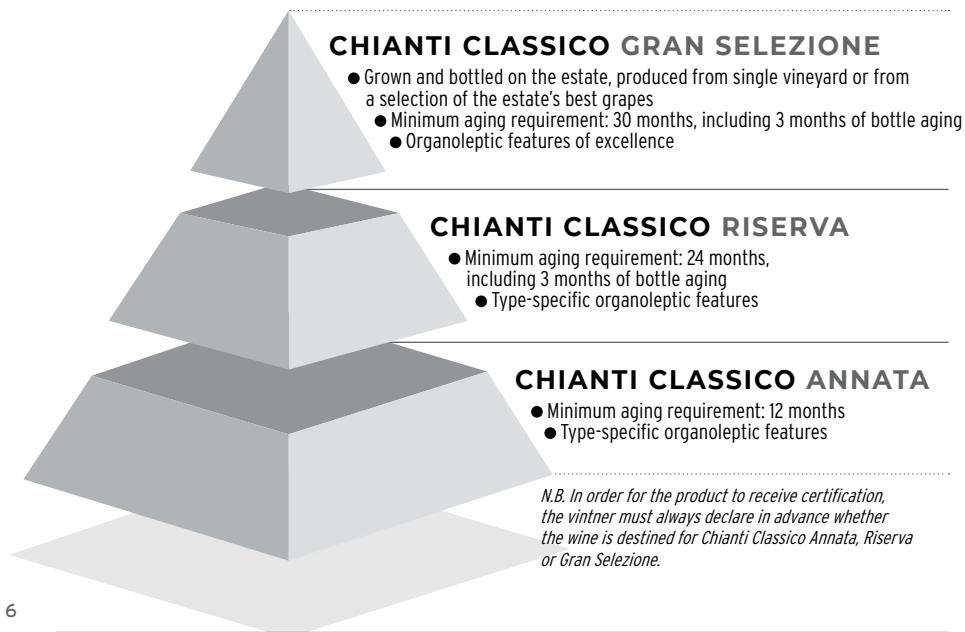

THE QUALITY PYRAMID

The denomination underwent a thorough overhaul in 2014, resulting in the launch of Gran Selezione, a new category at the peak of the DOCG quality pyramid. This was a first for Italian wine and viticultural legislative history.

Gran Selezione wines currently account for around 6% of Chianti Classico production. Made solely from grapes grown exclusively in the top vineyards of individual estates, Gran Selezione wines are subject to stringent regulations. The result is exceptional wines which provide the international wine market with a new quality benchmark. As well as meeting suitably high analytical and tasting standards, Gran Selezione wines may only be released on the market after 30 months cellaring plus a set period in bottle.

Gran Selezione wines showcase the diversity inherent to a wide ranging, heterogeneous area with different soils and microclimates. Divided into 11 Additional Geographical Units they ultimately remain united by the unmistakable character of the Sangiovese grape.

From a tasting perspective, they are well-structured wines whose careful grape selection and long ageing enhance their natural balance, harmony, depth of flavour and aromatic complexity. With a forward fruit character on the palate, their intriguing nuances are characteristic of wines with evident ageing potential.

QUALITY PRODUCTION: AN INTENTIONAL CHOICE

Another important fact is that, for the product to receive suitability certification, the vintner must always declare in advance whether the wine is to be used for Chianti Classico Annata, Riserva or Gran Selezione.

A PRODUCT THAT'S ALWAYS CERTIFIED

Under the current regulations, batches of Chianti Classico wine can be marketed only if certified as suitable by the pertinent control organization. Uncertified bulk wine can no longer be marketed. In the case of blends of already certified batches the blend itself must undergo suitability tests.

AN EVEN STRONGER BRAND: ENERGY, PRIDE AND ELEGANCE

The Black Rooster trademark that has stood for the entire Chianti Classico denomination has been given a graphic revision in 2013 to make it stand out even more on every bottle of Chianti Classico, always Bordeaux-style shaped. The logo with the Black Rooster symbol, is not anymore on the governmental seal, but it is to be located more visibly, on the neck of the bottle or rear label.

	CHIANTI CLASSICO ANNATA	CHIANTI CLASSICO RISERVA	CHIANTI CLASSICO GRAN SELEZIONE
Alcohol content (minimum)	12% vol.	12.5% vol.	13% vol.
Aging (minimum)	12 months	24 months	30 months
Minimum non-reductive extract	24 g/l	25 g/l	26 g/l
Total minimum acidity	4.5 g/l	4.5 g/l	4.5 g/l
Characteristics	Fruity, fine, appealing, nicely balanced and easy to drink, fresh, with balanced maturation.	Fruity, with fineness that accompanies and sustains the wine's structure, consistency and persistence.	Fruity, spicy, enveloping where elegance, structure, fineness and balanced tannins and acidity beget wines of great substance and aging potential.
